

Position: Locum Haematologist

Royal Hobart Hospital

1st April - 1st September 2010

The Royal Hobart Hospital is a University of Tasmania teaching hospital and the tertiary referral centre for clinical and diagnostic services for the state of Tasmania.

The appointee will participate in the provision of malignant and non-malignant clinical haematology services and, to a lesser extent, the diagnostic haematology services at the Royal Hobart Hospital.

The applicant will be required to be eligible for medical registration in Tasmania and possess the appropriate postgraduate qualifications.

Hobart is renowned for its excellent lifestyle and the many opportunities to enjoy Tasmania's natural and cultural heritage.
