

Nominate a Colleague

for the 2010 Celgene Awards for Clinical Research in Hematology

Award recipients will be determined by an independent selection committee based on their clinical contributions to hematology.

Career Achievement Award

The Career Achievement Award will be presented to a clinician who has contributed greatly to the hematology field throughout his or her career. Award funds in the amount of US $25,000 will be offered as a grant to the institution designated on the nomination for support of additional hematology research and related education.

Young Investigator Award

The Young Investigator Award will be presented to a clinician under the age of 45 who has made a noteworthy research contribution in clinical hematology during his or her career. Award funds in the amount of US $15,000 will be offered as a grant to the institution designated on the nomination for support of additional hematology research and related education.

How to Nominate a Colleague

To nominate a colleague, please complete the nomination form and provide the following materials:

- a nomination letter describing the impact of the nominee's work on the understanding, diagnosis and/or treatment of hematologic diseases
- an example of 1 of the nominee's contributions in the form of a published abstract or journal article
- a letter from another colleague seconding your nomination
- the nominee's current CV

Please consider individual institutional policies when nominating a colleague.

Deadline is October 7th, 2010

Judged by an independent committee

Please send the completed form (or a copy of it) with the required materials to:

Xcenda
Attn: Amanda Marks
